Chapter 1 by Ricky Advani

One Race...

One Winner...

I kept chanting these words in mind before I raced. Gulum-Ei was the bad guy, he had houses, women, money and happiness. Being a Planetlord of Kajuo, he was supposed to be a role model in our hearts, instead he instilled fear in us and robbed us of our hard earned Bitcoins. The Kaj Council was already about to terminate me for being a rebel, until I posed a challenge. A race that would decide the fate of our people

A race that would bring us freedom or A race that would make our lives more miserable

The hologram spiraled into the sky and the beacon powered up.

1...

I braced myself for impact. I clutched the gear both hands, ready to go.

Chapter 2 by Nini Reyes

It felt like Star Wars back in 1975 when we were kids. Although it was much more realistic for us. While the race was on, I thought about Darth Vader chasing Han Solo in the movie. As you know I was Han Solo with Chewbacca.

" I'm gonna win loser, you should have thought about challenging me".

" And you should've thought about what you just said bro, that is the finish line up there and I am 45.8 miles ahead of you".

Plus Han Solo was always alive when Darth Vader tried to kill him. And Darth Vader is 45.8 miles away from me, so I will hopefully win this race.

Caution, Caution, Your Gas Gauge Is Running Low. Caution Caution You Have To Stop The car now.

"No... No... NOOOOO"!!!! That loser is 45.8 miles ahead".

" Bye dude looks like you lost".

Does Gulum-Ei get his gas gauge fixed before the race or does the citizen win anyways?
